King Solomon's Throne:

The Master's Chair:

“East of Eden” is where Cain was married, built a town and founded a dynasty of creators (Genesis 4, 16). In The East, where the sun rises, the first murderer became the first builder.

This disturbing fact merits some consideration. The questions it raises lie at the very foundations of history. Light disturbs the order dreamt of the darkness of oblivion. That is its function. The darkness is pregnant with light and the builder is the midwife. The last descendant of Cain was Tubal of Cain, whose name means “the blacksmith of the universe.” The blacksmith is a man of knowledge who masters the four elements of earth, water, fire, & air. He has a skill which can accomplish what knowledge only promises, ripping open the belly of the earth, extracting metals, forging tools and everything else he might want and need in order to become king. He is, in effect, a practitioner of the “Royal Art”, that is to say the art of becoming a free man, able to choose his destiny and become increasingly self-sufficient.
